THE DRUNKARD'S BREAM.

[EXCHANGE.]

The drunkard dreamed of his old retreat Of his easy place in the tap-room And the liquor gleamed on his gloating eye, Till his lips to the sparkling glass drew nigh, He lifted it up with an eager glance, And sang as he saw the bubbles

Alas! I am myself again! Here's a truce to care, an adieu to pain, Welcome the cup with its creamy foam! Farewell to work and a mossy home; With a jolly-crew and a flowing bowl, In bar-room pleasures I love to roll!

Like a flash there came to the drunkard's side, His angel-child who that night had

Is the covey sick, or the dream amiss? Cheer up my lad, quick bumper quaff!" And he glared around with a fiendish laugh.

The drunkard raised his glass once more, And looked at its depths as so oft before: But started to see on its pictured foam, The face of the dead little child at Then again the landlord at him sneered

And the swaggering crowd of drunkards jeered But still as he tried that glass todrink But the wand of the dead one tapped the brink!

The landlord gasped, "I swear my man, Thou shalt take every drop of this MEETING AN ORATOR.

BILL NYE TRIES TO CONSOLE AN UN-KNOWN ON THE TRAIN.

then From His Advance Agent William Learns the True History of the Man Who

Riding gayly on the vestibule train and dressed in a neat and even expensive way, as I now do, I saw in the section ahead a wild looking man who might have been 19 or 91, I could not tell. He looked at his watch, a young lady's hunting case watch, with a chain made of human hair that needed a shampoo.

He looked at the watch, and then he ooked at a railroad folder, then he looked he took now and again from his handbag. Wetting his lips with some restorative which scented up the car, he would practice in a low, retreating breath, fit-ting the gestures to it so that people near him vacated their seats, while ever and anon he would hiss something through his clinched teeth and bite a large hole in the somewhat fixed air of the car. Then he would open his satchel and take Then he would open his satchel and take out a manuscript, which he read over sarnestly, and then he seemed to be repeating it in his mind. Then he would add gestures to it and bite large holes in the atmosphere and look wild.

Finally I went over and spoke to him.

asked him what seemed to be the trouble. He said that he was billed to trouble. He said that he was billed to lecture at Archy that evening, and that already he was two hours behind. If we did not make it up, he would lose $10, he said, and he looked at his watch again and then at the schedule. Then he ran over a portion of his lecture and examined the joints in some of his gestures to see if they were working smoothly. to see if they were working smoothly.

For some time I remained with him, talking with him and consoling him as best I might, finally telling him that I, too, was a lecturer, though I was keeping it as quiet as I could on account of my family, and so I went on trying to brace him up and give him courage even while I could hardly smile myself. His agent seemed to be along with him, and to him I finally addressed myself in the smoker a little later on.

"Can you not get a special or do something to relieve the anxiety of your attraction?" I inquired. "He seems to be suffering so much over it."

"My attraction," said the agent, biting off the ragged edge of his cigar wrapper and looking out at the frosty miles of northern country, "has been this way for eight years. I am taking him to the asylum. Eight years ago he was a young man. He made a hit when he graduated man. He made a hit when he graduated and delivered a thrilling speech regarding the American Indian. Never having seen the American Indian, he loved him. He said, among other things, that the American Indian approximated more nearly to what man should be—manly, grand, physically perfect, morally great and true to the instincts of his conscience -than any other race of beings, civilized or uncivilized. 'Where,' he asked, 'do we hear such noble sentiments or meet with such examples of heroism and self sacrifice as the history of the American Indian furnishes? Where shall we go again to hear such oratory as that of Black Hawk and Logan? Certainly the records of our so called civilization do not furnish it, and the present century is devoid of it. They were the true children of the Great Spirit. They lived nearer to the great throbbing heart of the Creator than do their palefaced conquerors of today who mourn over the lost and undone condition of the savage. Courageous, brave and the soul of honor, their cruel and awful destruction from off the face of the earth is a sin of such magnitude that the people of America may well shrink from the just punish-ment which is sure to follow the assassination of so brave a race.' He had quite a lot of things like that in his speech, and his father, who had a chattel mortgage on the press of The Home and Vindicator of our place, got it printed to the ex-clusion of the tax list and other spicy

"Friends then petitioned him to let the boy lecture. He swelled up with par-donable pride and encouraged the young man, and so he started out. He was all wrapped up in the Indian, and so he prepared a lecture on 'The Red Man, Past and Present.' He put all the poetry into it that a boy who had never seen an In-dian would. He practiced on his piece all the time, and finally he got an engagement. It was in a nearby town where they were trying to buy a library. They only needed $800 more, and so they had decided to have a course of lectures during the Winter. The committee intended to have one lecture on 'The Arctic Region and How to Avoid Going There' by an old arctic explorer who had taken 50 picked men up to where he could hear the north end of the earth's axis squeak, had eaten the leather ends off his suspenders, taken the latitude and longitude, picked some of his tenderest men again and returned. It was also the scheme to have a lecture on 'Political Economy and How to Put Money in the National Pocket' by a man who lived on his sister-in-law and who was clothed by his son-in-law. The committee had also decided to employ an able theologian to lecture on 'Inside Facts Regarding Di-vine Retribution' by a man who had given his whole life to a study of kindred subjects. Then a well known humorist was to follow with a lecture on 'Scaffold Orators and Orations, Past and Present.' "Last of all, Napoleon Pangborn, my young friend, was to lecture on 'The Redskin and His Wrongs.' The price of the whole course ticket was only $3, and the public was on the q- veeve, as you might say, to hear the closing lecture. "Napoleon had not been idle. He had not eaten anything but oatmeal for days, and his lips were bloodless and parched. When his family spoke to him, he replied briefly and then muttered portions of his lecture to himself. "At last the day and the hour came He inserted his arm in his breast, as he had seen pictures of Demosthenes doing, and began in a low voice. A coarse man with a course ticket yelled 'Louder' and Napoleon began over again. He went on pensively to speak of the Indians in their purity and simplicity as they were found by Columbus, the wealthier ones perhaps clothed in the pelt of a chipmunk, while the poorer ones were thinly clad in atmospheric phenomena, and so on. Then another man, a wagon maker from Lower Jasper, who was holding a little child that was eating a cooky with pink sugar on it, said in a gruff voice: 'Can't ye speak so's we can hear ye? Never mind the gestures. Speak up!

"Napoleon fetched a little kind of sob and took a glass of water. Then he tried again, beginning back where he started out, but raising his voice higher and higher till it was split and ruptured at the end of every sentence. When he got through, the committee told him they thought that 'was a pretty easy way to earn $8,' but gave it to him, including a lead dollar.

"Afterward the Fly-Capper-Sigh, of which he was a member, gave him a banquet. (They had previously invited him, and so could not well back out.) He went, though there was a wild, hunted look in his eye as he started. The banquet was not quite ready, for, as the steward of the restaurant said, 'the Cove oysters had not came yet,' so Napoleon sat in the antercom, and people went by and examined him as if they were taking a farewell look at him before the lid was screwed down.

"He was very cold and quite hungry, not having eaten anything since he had agreed to deliver the lecture, but they put him at the cold end of the room by the side of a frapped president, who made notes on the back of his menu and frightened out of Napoleon what little intelligence he had left.

"The restaurant was a very poor one indeed, and the china had large, dark chips knocked out of it by people who had tried to drive in picture nails with it. The courses were widely segregated, and the dishes came on each time warm and hurried and panting, as who should say: We may be a little slow about it, but we do not miss a single course. We also aim to please.'

"Well, to make a long story short, the agony could not be drawn out any longer, and finally the president rapped on the table with the iron handle of his already exhausted knife and said, 'We have with us this evening'—just as though they had been in the habit of entertaining all the crowned heads that came to town. the crowned heads that came to town.

Then he spoke briefly and tersely of Napoleon and introduced him as the silver tongued representative of the Fly-Capper-Sigh of Jasper.

"Napoleon arose, wiped his cold lips with a napkin, and taking the tablecloth with a corner he jerked.

with one hand by the corner he jerked it about due east as the crow flies, gave the shriek of a demon, and tying the table linen around the throat of the president choked him to death. Then picking up a whole custard pie he struck a little fellow on the opposite side of the table so as to fill the ear to overflowing, caught hold of a carving knife and fled through the village, cutting holes in constables and biting elderly people on their way home. He has cleared out two asylums already, and now he is on his way to Waupaca. He still thinks, poor boy, that he is to lecture at Jasper tonight and that if he should disappoint them he will be out $10."

SITTING DOWN BY THE ROADSIDE. The lecturer has two or three great obstacles to overcome which the actor has not-viz, he has no scenery, he has to occupy the entire evening alone, and there is no division into three or four acts with a chance for the audience to rest and run down the show. And yet the lecturer often starts out fearlessly without training, or with training that is far worse than none, and on the reputation he has made in some totally different art he fearlessly rushes in where angels would naturally hang back and advertises to lecture. At the expense of the public he thus, if persistent and brave, at last learns to be natural-if he didn't foolishly get his originality and individuality trained out of him by a journeyman elocutionist on the startand is then considered a professional. He can think of other more interesting topics than his speech and sit himself down by the roadside of life at times to calmly remove the thorns and brambles from his tired feet—thorns and brambles accumulated all along the harsh and fiercely thorny road over which he has

Lecturers are better treated on the whole now than 20 years ago, and the eggs used by those who criticise the per-formance are of a higher order of excellence, it seems to me.

No one can be quicker to recognize and appreciate such a reform than I can. No one hails with greater glee or more optimistic salvos of applause this stride in the direction of improvement. I had intended to give a few little personal experiences in the way of anecdotes of a comic character, but space forbids; besides I doubt the good taste of writing flippantly of such a serious matter as lecturing, especially humorous lecturing. I had also thought of devoting a page to lecture managers with whom I have met, but the subject is too prolific, and besides I am afraid that some lecture manager might reply with an essay on "Lecturers With Whom He Has Met." Someother time I will write of these things, so that it will be an easy matter for the reader to learn how to lecture successfully by a few evenings'

THE Glorious Fourth!

THE Glorious Fourth of July!

THE Soldiers Reunion will be held at the Fair Grounds next Tuesday, the Fourth.

COLLECTOR POWERS' first appointment is that of Cal Thomas, a negro, to be janitor of the Custom House. Thomas is a native of Hartford and bears the unenviable notoriety of being the only Democratic negro in Owensboro. H. C. Pace was also an applicant for the same place.

It is well that the people have day specially set apart for the purpose of contemplating the history of the country, the deeds of her heroes and the achievements of her statesmen. Such a day is the Glorious Fourth. Come out and assist in making things pleasant for the old soldiers.

THE young scoundrels who rang the Court House bell Monday night had as well own up to their devilment first as last for public opinion has them spotted. The good people of town need protection from such insults and annoyances, and they should demand it in a manner that cannot be misunderstood.

ELSEWHERE will be found the announcement of Hop. E. D. Guffy as a candidate for the Senate in this Senatorial District. Mr. Guffy needs no introduction to the Republicans of the District, being well acquainted over the three counties. He is one of the most prominent lawyers of the Green River country, is an active Republican and will go into the Convention with a strong following.

WE announce Mr. C. S. Taylor, of Cromwell, as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Senator from this District. Mr. Taylor is most popular where he is best known. He is a successful farmer, a moral, upright christian gentleman, a good speaker and a good Republican. WASHINGTON.

Mr. Cleveland, according to Demoratic authority, is about to duplicate his unconstitutional action in sending "my personal agent" to Hawaii by appointing a personal agent to take charge of the Government printing office and reorganize its entire working force and system-another the 8th Senatorial District, subject to name for dismissing Republican employes. His reason is stated to be that he wishes this reorganization to be made by a man who will feel no responsibility to Congressmen or Congress. The personal agent who is to have all the powers of the Public Senatorial District, subject to the Printer without any of his responsibility will have no excuse or warrant of law for existing, only the will of Mr. Cleveland, which appears to be rapidly taking the place of the constitution. Congress in its wisdom enacted a law compelling the Publis Printer to give a bond of $100,000the lagest with one exception given by any United States official for the faithful discharge of his responsible duties. This law will be ignored if Mr. Cleveland's personal agent is given all the authority of the Public Printer and not required to give the same bond. The resignation of the present Public Printer, Mr. Palmer, has been at Mr. Cleveland's disposal for months. His term expired more than a month ago.

There are a number of Democrats at present in Washington, including several Congressmen, who are in open rebellion against so much of the Chicago Democratic platform as it declared protection to be unconstitutional. These Democrats not only believe protection to be constitutional, but they believe it to be absolutely essential to the perservation of indusdries already well established in the United States, not to mention new ones. They are citizens of Louisiana engaged in sugar planting and they are here to impress upon Mr. Cleveland and, Secretary Carlisle and other Democrats who are to have a hand in preparing the new Tariff bill the necessity of putting a Tariff of 1 1-2 or 2 cents a pound upon foreign sugar, if the present bounty upon domestic sugar is to be abolished. From the above it will be seen that there will be Democrats fighting for protection, as well as Democrats fighting for Free Trade when Congress takes up the Tariff question this fall.

"If I were one of the pensioners dropped," said a California lawyer, in Washington on a pleasure trip, by reason of the reversal of the construction placed upon the disability, not of service origin, clause of the act of 1890 by Gen. Raum and ex-Secretary Noble, I should appeal to the courts for the proper construction of the law. I do not pretend to say which is right, but certainly both cannot be. Ex-Secretary Noble, is I think, a better lawyer than Secretary Hoke Smith, and Gen. Raum's reputation as a lawyer is as good, if not quite so high as Judge Lochren, his successor at the head of the Pension office. Noble and Raum put one construction on this law and Smith and Lochren another that is directly opposite. Now the courts should be given a whack at it." Representative Caruth, of Kentucky, is one Democrat who believes that Mr. Cleveland may again be the Presidential candidate of his party. When some gentlemen were discussing the availability of Governor Flower, of New York, and several western men Mr. Caruth after expressing his opinion as to the probable candidate remarked significantly: "All this, I want to add, is on the presumption, of course, that Mr. Cleveland will not consent to allow his name to be presented for the third term." In other words, Mr. Caruth does not believe that any other man can get the nomination if Mr. Cleveland wants it, and there is but little doubt about his wanting it.

Paymaster John C. Sullivan, of the navy, who received a lot of unenviable notoriety and so narrowly escaped being court-martialed for criticising dame rumor says, Josh replied that the action of the Harrison Administration in dealing with Canadian poachers in Behring Sea, is now to be tried by a court-martial upon a more serious charge-embezzling $12,000 of Government funds.

Of course nothing can restore the lives of those who were killed in the accident at Ford's Theatre, but it is a satisfaction to the families of the victims to know that as far as the coroner's jury can do it, the responsibilsty for the wholesale murder has been placed upon Col. Ainsworth, chief of the Records and Pension division of the War department, who was in charge of the building; G.W. Dant, the contractor who made the excavation, which was the direct cause of the falling of the floors; W. E. Covert of propriety and good taste. Little and F. Wise grew rapidly worse until about to o'clock, when he was a raving maniac. It required the combined efforts of Sheriff Richardt and Jailors Sweeney and Grainger to control him at all. He was put into the padded cell and a watch kept on him all night. The Sheriff retired about midnight, leaving orders that he should be aroused if Lum became worse.

About 3 o'clock in the morning the patient became much easier, but the improvement only lasted for a short time. Extracts From Town Tattler. O, yes! those young bloods who rang the Court House bell Monday night are nice fellows, they are daisies. So kind and thoughtful of other people's peace and quietude; so public spirited. Yes, indeed boys, your act was exceedingly smart; it was in such good taste; it was so in keeping with your depraved nature; so much like your three quarter inch forehead, and it was funny, too. So funny to disturb everybody in town and scare them with the sound of the fire alarm. You are brilliant chaps indeed. You have about brains enough to fill a mustard seed and they are of a very cheap variety. You ought to be arrested and fined and but for the sympathy the people have for the good people who are so unfortunate as to be closely connected with you by kinship and otherwise, you would have ere this been in the cold harsh hands of the law, as all law-breakers ought, of right to be.

Our good people have noticed for a year or two the continued effrontery of an abuse on our streets, which long ago should have been nipped in the bud. It is quite common to see a fellow "put over the box," and paddled. This may be funny to those who indulge in it, but it is quite disgusting to those who have some sense boys and young men even are seized two of the tormentors belabor him with boards or sections of goods boxes or barrel staves. Such practices are insulting to ladies who pass on the streets, besides keeping the little boys in constant dread of being scorched with the paddle. The Blue and Gray.

The magazine which began publication under the above name in January, is very rapidly coming to the front as one of the most popular American Monthlies. As its name implies, it is devoted principally to reminiscences and original stories of the late war, written by the survivors of both sides. The illustrations compare very favorably with those of the older magazines, as do also the character of the articles. It is one of the most interesting publications of the day to both old and young. The regular price is 25 cents per month, but the Cincinnati Tribune Company has made an exclusive contract for its territory, by which the regular readers of The Tribune can secure the Blue and Gray for the remarkably low price of 10 cents per . month. Full particulars as to how the Blue and Gray can be obtained at this price can be found in any issue of The Daily Madison Cawein, Hugh and Val Starnes and others contribute poems, and Hester Higbee writes two short papers, which will interest Southern readers, although they may excite controversy. Fetter's is establishing itself with each issue as one of the best magazines of this country, and worthy of special support by Southern people.

About the Reunion. EDITOR REPUBLICAN:-I have read with much interest of the arrangements which are being made for a joint re-union of the old soldiersboth the Blue and the Gray at Hartford on the coming fourth of July. many gallant men to do battle in the late war, and their names and deeds should not be permitted to lapse into oblivion during the lifetime of the present generation and, indeed, not at all. The Union had no more gallant defenders than Captain Preston Morton and John W. Hill, both of whom sealed their devotions to their flag and their country with their lives. One on the bloody field of Shiloh and the other in the heroic defence of Knoxville, while in the cause of the Confederacy, Captain Wm. G. Mitchell, handsome, accomplished and brave, laid down his promising young life at Shiloh, while genial and gallant Fielden Foreman heroricly met a sudden death at Chicamauga, and dashing Craven Peyton gave up his young life at Hartsville. Nor should those gallant soldiers of the Union, Col. Cicero Maxwell, Capt. Henry M. Bennett, Lieutenant John G. Ferguson, Tom Alex Barnett, Watt Lawton and Andy Barnett, who died of disease and wounds, be forgotton, nor those no less gallant Confederates, John Berryman, Sam Brooks, Jim Mitchell and Billy Harris. These men were friends and neighbors before the war-their people are neighbors and friends now and their fame should be a common heritage of Ohio county menting their fate and in keeping alive in the memory of man their names and deeds.

A Story on Reagan.

[ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC.] "I shall never forget an episode that happened in which ex-Senator Reagan, of Texas, was the chief actor," said ex-Gov. Knott, as the talk turned on incidents of his career as a Congressman. "We were in the House together, and warm friends. One evening I called to see him at his hotel, and found him surrounded by a merry company, among whom were several ladies. After conversing for a while, to my surprise Judge Reagan invited everybody to his rooms, where he said he had some very fine wine. I knew him to be one of the most temperate of men, and could not understand the invitation, but it appears that some New York friend had sent him a basket of the best champagne, a beverage that he had a very slender acquaintance with. A servant was summoned to open the bottles, and a good many of them were emptied before the party adjourned. The next morning the Texan slept later than usual, and was at length awakened by a knock at his door. Supposing it to be a servant, he bade him come in, and turned over for further slumber. But it was not a servant. Far different. It was Mr. Reagan's own minister, who had just arrived from the Lone Star State, and whose look of astonishment as he glanced about him at those empty champagne bottles can better be imagined than described.

"Reagan by this time was thoroughly awake, and he, too, cast a horrified glance at the debris. Then he began explaining: "The Chairman of the Judiciary Committee called on me last evening, and in compliment to him we drank a little wine," said he. Stooping down and picking up from the floor a gold ornament, th parson said, with a smile:

"And does the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee wear bracelets?"

wanted.

[HARPER'S BAZAAR.] Chief among the curiosities of literature must be accounted the strange judgments of men who would be supposed to have an appreciation of what is best, upon the works of others. It was no less a person than Goldsmith who observed of the poems of Milton, that "they betray a narrowness of education and a degeneracy of habit;" adding to this extraordinary dictum the still more audacious assertion that "there is no force in his reasoning, no eloquence in his style, and no taste in his composition." Waller, an anthill poet compared to the soaring loftiness of Milton, yet presumably a man who could reason, said of Paradise Lost, that if its length be not considered as merit, it has no other. Hume deemed Shakespeare "adisproportioned, misshapen giant;" while George the Third, who ought to have known better, and yet, all things considered, could hardly have been expected to think otherwise, sapiently asked, "was there ever such stuff as the greater part of Shakespeare?"

WORK AND PLAY COMBINED.

The Ingenious Scheme of Mr. August Pirch and How It Succeeds An English writer on inventive geniuses tells a story of a certain Mr. August Pirch who is the happy possessor of a dozen fine healthy children. Mr. Pirch, so the story goes, had a tract of land that could not be used for the want of water, since it was far from any available stream or other body which might prove of use in the fertilization of his acres, and how to irrigate the land without spending a large sum of money was a mystery which for a long time Mr. Pirch could not solve.

He figured out the cost of a well and found that his resources would permit of his digging a 60-foot well and the purchase of a cheap pump, but how to make the pump work was a question. Suddenly his inventive mind suggested a solution. He remembered his children, and he also called to mind a certain large family swing which he had seen in a neighboring town. He knew the swing would please the children, and he hoped that through it their pleasure might be able to serve his interests. The well was bored, the pump was set up, and the swing was put in working order.

"Here, now, boys," said he, when all was ready, calling the children to him, "come out here and get in this swing. I'm going to give you something to play with." In five minutes the children were flying backward and forward through the air. The pump worked up and down gayly as you please, and a 14inch stream of water flowed from the well. Mr. Pirch's scheme had worked. The children do not know that they are working, as the swing is some distance from the well and is connected with it by an iron rod which works the pump as the swing moves backward and forward.

The scheme has worked well, and it is said that the youngsters pump enough water during their day's sport to irrigate a large tract.-Harper's Young People.
